Armour's careful use of color is seen in the blue-and-white porcelain and sterling silver accents alongside the two different backsplashes and fabric prints.

JMA INTERIOR DESIGN

Embracing her clients' Scandinavian heritage, Jackie Armour designed this new traditional kitchen with sleek lines, pops of color and stylish patterns—a bona fide mix of classic and fresh design elements. Armour's clients were keen on color, so she went with bespoke soft blue-gray cabinetry and added to the space's sophisticated feel with glass doors where her clients could showcase their Blue Danube china collection. The second island, perfect for hosting a relaxed meal or cocktails, features custom upholstered stools with a vibrant pattern that nods to traditional Scandinavian homespun prints. Ava WJ Mosaic tiles make the kitchen's backsplash pop and are balanced with subtle Pompeii quartz countertops. The steely blue hue of the Hobe Sound 6,500-square-foot home interior elegantly melds the kitchen with the adjacent living and dining rooms.

JIM DOVE DESIGN

After chatting with these first-time clients, Jim Dove clearly understood the entertainment style that drove this kitchen's design. Their vision for this new space inspired Dove to curate an alluring and functional area for loved ones to come together—whether to cook, drink or hang out. The second island, dubbed the social island, offers seating and is steps away from the coffee bar, where guests can conveniently satisfy those morning caffeine cravings. The space's custom gray cabinetry features shimmering metal banding on the custom hood and islands, creating a compelling contrast with the rustic brick flooring. "It reflects the glamour and sophistication that the clients possess," he says. The subdued porcelain backsplash and countertops allow the cabinetry to truly shine in this 6,000-square-foot Wellington residence.

Krista W. Alterman ▶
KRISTA + HOME

Taking inspiration from her client's love for Bali and earthy tones, Krista Alterman designed a modern Balinese kitchen with a global vibe for this Palm Beach home. The client leaned more toward dimmer shades, so the designer focused on dark woods and finishes, balancing them with organic materials, including statement chandeliers crafted from organic banana bark. Alterman explains the space she created for her clients reflects their personalities perfectly. "They wanted a space with a 'cool' factor—something a bit on the bohemian side but still luxurious." They also craved something unexpected. Alterman delivered by showcasing Opustone slate gray porcelain with marbling throughout the space, from the countertops to the backsplash. She also chose custom cabinetry boasting a moody black finish. The designer sheathed the ceiling in shiplap to bring light into the kitchen, and painted it in Benjamin Moore Sheep's Wool.

The space overlooks the luminous Intracoastal with floor-to-ceiling windows, creating a dynamic pairing of twilight interiors and spectacular views.
